These are some of my favorite new features:

- Create a Stitched Panorama composite from multiple images: Photoshop now gives you the option to create a panorama from a long-exposure photo. In Photoshop CC you can open and create them from a long-exposure image, straight from the Camera Raw interface. Just choose the Create a Panorama Composite from Creative Cloud button.
- Autoelevate: A new feature allows autoelevate to be enabled or disabled for any layer, which helps keep your images aligned and level. Simply select your layer and from the Layers panel controls, check or uncheck the Autoelevate checkbox.
- Warm Up: Previously this was a feature that only worked with one subset of layers with adjustment layers. This new change will allow Warm Up to modify all adjustment layers regardless of the active state.

With the new DisplayControl feature you can use either a new tab on the Layers panel or the View menu to toggle the intensity of your image to display various lighting, color, or tone variations you've created. Simply toggle the display and change your image in a matter of seconds. What It Does: Adobe Camera Raw lets you apply a whole slew of adjustments to images, including titling, color balance, manual exposure correction, saturation, sharpness, contrast, etc. By simply selecting the C&R button in your favorite photo editor you'll be able to access and edit images from any application that supports Camera Raw. 933d7f57e6

And then there is color picker that allows you to erase areas that you don't want in the image, or highlight the areas that you have chosen. And lastly, a motion tool will allow you to track a moving object in the image. With this, you can use the tool to create a turntable, or stop the image at certain frames for the best possible motion shot.
