FontTrax is the ultimate font utility. It is a Taskbar utility jam-packed with the font tools you need. FontTrax instantly pops up on top of other applications showing every installed font on your system using the font's style. It displays fonts (installed or not) along with complete details of each font, plus you can view the font up to 1000 points in multiple views including every character in the font. FontTrax prints professional-quality specimen sheets (even in color!), print font catalogs, save 'PrinterPacks' for maximum flexibility, all with a variety of different templates. FontTrax offers the ability to install or uninstall fonts individually or in 'FontPacks', allowing management beyond Windows font limits. FontTrax Checks (and fixes!) your font system, produces cross-reference reports, checks capacity and offers suggestions to keep your font system in top shape. Limitations: ⬜ 30 days trial ⬜ the Disk Diagnostic feature is unavailabe in the trial version DataDoctor is an application for recovering, formatting, organizing, and repairing damaged data files. What's New In?

I'm not sure if it's the fonts, Windows XP, an unstable connection or a combination of all three. Whenever I try to use FontTrax, it doesn't start. The taskbar icon doesn't have the proper application name and, when I click on the icon, the application window doesn't appear. I've tried installing on both the 64-bit and 32-bit versions of Windows XP and, either way, the application doesn't work. I'll keep trying and report back when I have a solid problem report. Edit: I tried the following on the 32-bit version and get the same result. Uninstalled FontTrax. Reinstalled FontTrax. Rebooted. Tried various known good.exe files on a trial basis (an.exe I created, as well as the.exe file from the FontTrax trial). Uninstalled FontTrax, rebooted, reinstalled, rebooted, reinstalled. Uninstalled the FontTrax trial and rebooted. Enabled Java. Reinstalled FontTrax. The only exception is the trial version. When I install that version, the program functions perfectly. However, even the trial version is unable to function properly on my machine. I've been trying to report this bug since I first opened the FontTrax trial. Not only does it not work, it doesn't give me a reason why it doesn't work. I'm running Windows XP Home edition, SP2. This machine is a good one. The problem started to happen after I installed the lastest security update from Microsoft. Thanks for your help. I also am having the same problem. I am not sure if it is the update from microsoft or if it is the fonts. I have installed the latest fonts and the application still will not run. I am trying to fix it for the next few days. I've also tried installing the trial version. Nothing works.
