Adobe is bringing the ability to make Microsoft Surface fully interactive® to its latest desktop applications. Go to the Surface App Gallery, open the 'apps' tab and you will see the 'Apps' only' section. Adobe has a new brush, Airbrush, and old faithful Paintbrush. The new brush works differently from the older ones, making it easier to control and adjust settings. The Airbrush lets you keep the shape exactly the same, and manipulate it like you would with an actual airbrush, and changes hue, saturation, and brightness. The new panel is also much easier to use. Previously, you had to click on the Edit tab to change things. Now it's quick and easy to make new adjustments by clicking anywhere in the panel. You can drag a bracket to enlarge that area and pan and zoom to see the whole image to get a better preview. You can also reset the bracket by double-clicking on the new reset button.
